Review procedure for the manuscripts submitted to Studia Linguistica

The Review Board considers only the manuscripts which meet the formal requirements specified in editorial recommendations (see style sheet). In the first stage of the review process the editors reserve the right to select the manuscripts which are appropriate for the profile of a current volume. Next, two independent external reviewers are appointed for the evaluation of each text. In the case of manuscripts written in a foreign language at least one reviewer is affiliated in a foreign institution other than the author's and/or is the native speaker of the given language. The manuscripts are anonymously reviewed. The current list of Review Board members is available at the Studia Linguistica website. A review has a written form (see review form) and includes recommendations as to the manuscript's publication. The final decision regarding acceptance of a positively assessed manuscript is taken by the Editorial Board after the Research Committee's approval.

Authors are warmly welcome to publish in Studia Linguistica!
